Drop your comments Big Shaq — also known as comedian/rapper Michael Dapaah — has returned with a music video for his latest single, 'Buss It Down'. See him below. The clip is co-directed by Shaq and Luke Biggins. It opens with a definition of the word bursement, which according to the funny, means securing what is due in this life. The visual follows Shaq as he holds a meeting with his crew to discuss who is hot on the streets right now. Annoyed at hearing that he is no longer on the popular list, Shaq launches a plan to launch new fire, as suggested by one of his associates. Check out the 'Divers It Down' video here: 'Shaq shot to fame in 2017 after posting his viral hit, 'Man's Not Hot'. Last year, he followed it up with the sequel, 'Man Don't Dance', and dropped a freestyle, 'Daily Duppy'. Speaking to NME at the 2018 Brit Awards, Shaq revealed that he wants to work and look forward to some day touring with Noel Gallagher. Noel Gallagher, he's a legend, Shaq told NME. The approval of a legend of what you're doing is nice, but you know, hopefully and we see what's going to happen. So far, this collaboration has not yet met, although Shaq has hinted at working with Liam. In July, Shaq returned with a new season of his popular YouTube mockumentary series, Somewhere In London. The last episode of season two came on September 4. 4.
